

The Vox Bandicoot workplace environment training and development program SOSee 'Sustainable Opportunities & Solutions – environmental & economic', fosters ownership and a positive and supportive culture. It does this by maximising participation, the strongest foundation for behaviour enhancement or change. SOSee is based on decades of experience with clients including local government, Boeing, VDO Mannesman, Ford Australia, The Victorian Auditor General's Office, Robert Bosch, Yazaki AAPL and many more.

What is the SOSee Approach?

This program engages everybody from the newest recruit to the C.E.O. Everybody hears the wake up call. Everybody moves to participate. We can guarantee that you will be excited by the results of this empowering method of training for environmental best practice and culture.

Research among the top organisations in the world has revealed that creating a supportive workplace culture is the most enduring and cost-effective means of achieving the best possible environmental performance.

This program is integrated, comprehensive and optimistic and can be tailored to suit your specific needs. It ranges from one-off 'green-team' booster sessions, through to the full benchmark program to augment your EMS/ISO 1401 or broader sustainability culture and behaviour change objective.

Such a full, benchmark SOSee would...

- » begin with a consultative search conference program, including a survey of the indicators of culture in your organisation.
- » then move to a briefing of the "Leaders of the 21st Century" – to achieve Board and Management 'buy-in'.
- » foster Universal Inspiration with sessions for 100% of the work community to inspire and promote positivity and participation. Staff are invited to voice and volunteer for...
- » Enviro Reps! Our job is to "make ourselves redundant". The training, empowerment, skills and inspiration given to a representative group from across your organisation will ensure that relevance and involvement stays in your organisation. Your workplace culture and sustainability program is defined by and thrives upon the will and input of your people.

Environmental sustainability in the workplace is about the only game in town in which it's like you can walk around and pick up $50 bills off the floor... only to find a couple of $100 bills hidden underneath.

The savings to be made are the bonus to the contribution which you are also making to the sustainability of natural systems. It's that simple.'

AMORY LOVINS,
ROCKY MOUNTAINS INSTITUTE – U.S.A.

No planet, no profit! No ecology, no economy! This time in history calls for us to look for Sustainable Opportunities & Solutions, both environmental & economic. Sir Nicholas Stern, former World Bank Chief Economist, researched the economic implications of climate change for the British Government. Stern said that a failure to act now could lead to the worst 'market-error' in history with an economic impact greater than that of the Great Depression and both World Wars combined. He noted that a 1% investment of GDP now, could forestall the need to spend 20% or more in the near future. Ross Garnaut, in doing the same type of analysis for the Australian Government, said "...unless we get this right, humanity will regret it for the rest of time!"

The benchmark SOSee program provides participants with motivation and skills, which can be used every day to drive sustainability culture change and practice. A culture which is defined by and thrives according to the ideas, input and energy of those closest to the job... your workplace community.

As well as the base SOSee pedagogy and methodology, the program also includes useful and increasingly relevant advanced components. Such things as...

- » Carbonopoly is a 'hands-on' interactive ETS simulation program which provides a comprehensive understanding of the brave new eco-eco world. It is especially designed for Board and Management, and the finance department, but can be readily adapted for all levels of your organisation.
- » The SustainaClopedia - as the name suggests
- » CD based and online training Modules, again, tailored to your organisation. Especially valuable for "Induction Training".
- » The Community - In your workplace community there will be heaps of existing knowledge and experience. through the workplace SOSee Community, people will be empowered and knowledge shared.
- » A workplace based ecological-fingerprint device, a tool which has been appraised and endorsed by Dr. David Suzuki.

The Vox Bandicoot corporate workplace sustainability training program is both deep and wide. The days of the powerpoint blitz approach have come and gone. Vox delivers programs that built on our organisational strengths and are then driven by maximising participation and ownership.

I thoroughly recommend Vox Bandicoot to any organisation, big or small, to deliver what are becoming increasingly significant and overdue environmental messages and symbols across all level of staff.
